

Where does the money have the greatest growth potential?

Investors interested in properties have a wide range of options, from traditional stock investment, where you can just lean back and wait for ongoing reports, to buy a property where you as an investor are responsible for the entire operation.

"Your investment" is an ad supplement in Berlingske, which is aimed at the many property-interested readers with money in their pocket. More than 400,000 Berlingske readers/users have already invested in stocks, shares and bonds - and almost 300,000 are considering acquiring securities in the household.

In "Your investment" we take a look at the advantages and disadvantages of investing in housing and commercial real estate, and focus on the things that the investor must take into account. Where is the most attractive investment right now?

What are the risks? How to relate to interest and returns when the property is sold again?
